

Making a Presentation

August 26, 2008, 9 – 11 a.m.

South Health Center Auditorium, Los Angeles, CA

presenter: Michael L. Prelip, MPH DPA CHES

- 9 a.m.
- Welcome
 - Philosophy on Presentations
 - Developing a Command Presence
 - Making the Most Out of Your Voice
 - How Gestures Can Help
 - Making Eye Contact Your Best Friend
 - Motivating Your Audience
 - Preparing Your Presentation
- 11 a.m.
- Evaluation and End

Mike Prelip, MPH, DPA, CHES, is currently an associate professor in the Department of Community Health Sciences at the UCLA School of Public Health, where his primary responsibilities are teaching in the graduate program and continuing education for public health professionals. He teaches courses in community based program planning, research and evaluation, fund development, community organization, and leadership and empowerment. Dr. Prelip is currently involved in a number of research projects, which are all community-based public health focused, using a community participatory model. These include projects working with local school districts to develop a process to improve the school and community environment to be more "nutrition friendly"; and to development evaluation methods to assess impact of school based nutrition education programs. He is also involved in the development and evaluation of worksite wellness programs for school personnel. Mike also works on several communication projects focusing on a number of health topics, including fetal alcohol syndrome prevention and immunizations.